

NATHAN MCGUIRE

ABOUT NATHAN

Actor · Model · Founder

Nathan is a Whadjuk Noongar man from Boorloo (Perth), Western Australia, currently based in Naarm (Melbourne). He is an actor, established fashion model, and the founder of First Nations organisation, Mob In Fashion.

Nathan graduated from 16th Street Actors Studio in 2025 and is focused on building a career across film, television and stage. His approach to acting is grounded in discipline, preparation and long-term craft development.

Alongside his acting work, Nathan has built a highly respected career in the fashion industry. He was the first Aboriginal man to front a global Calvin Klein campaign and be awarded GQ Model of the Year. He has also been the first Aboriginal male model to be an ambassador for David Jones (2022 – 2025) and the lead male face of a Country Road campaign.

Through his success in fashion, Nathan founded Mob In Fashion, a platform dedicated to creating opportunities for First Nations creatives through mentorship, visibility and industry access.

Before entering the creative industries, Nathan competed at a high level in field hockey, representing his state and being selected for the Kookaburras National Development Squad. This background continues to inform how he works, with focus, resilience and professionalism.
