

Lorraine Joy - Bio

Lorraine Joy is known for her supporting lead role in a sci-fi- drama trilogy Love and Triangles, currently on the awards circuit winning best feature at the New York Women's Film Festival and winner of The Oscar Season Award for Europa Prize Best Feature Film.

Her work lies in the world of screen as an actor, voice-over artist, and independent producer/filmmaker in Sydney, Australia.

Lorraine Joy has trained with institutions such as The Hub Studio (Jo Briant, Kat Hoyos, Imara Savage, Kevin Jackson) and the Screen Alliance Association. She has also privately been coached by Anthony Brandon Wong, Stephanie Pringle, Simon Williams performance coach (Actors Accession Program), accent coach Claire Corff (LA), voice coach Donald Woodburn, voice-over coach Deanna Cooney (WAPAA), and casting director Toni Higginbotham. Lorraine continues her professional development with Kat Hoyos in The Business Formula Program.

Lorraine's special talent includes over 12 years as a beauty and massage therapist. She also has her brown belt in Shotokan karate before pursuing the arts full-time.

Lorraine works as a filmmaker with strengths in continuity, script supervising, production management, and producing. Lorraine brings preparation and focus to every project with a curious, positive, and open team mentality.

Lorraine feels called to share her expansion on recovery and healing with women's mental & physical health issues as a single parent. She enjoys quality family time on the weekends indulging in Disney films and scouting the yummiest milkshakes on the Coast with her daughters.
