

Sotiris has only been an actor for 3 years and in that short time has achieved great success, his first role was in Glendyn Ivin's mini series, Gallipoli and his most recent role along side a stellar cast in Warwick Thornton's award winning feature film Sweet Country.

His work with award winning indie director Addison Heath on Mondo Yakuza has led him to securing future roles with Black Forest films in 2018. In his career he has worked on many student short films with up and coming talented people from many of the fine film schools in Melbourne.

Sotiris also loves the theatre and starred in 'It's Now or Never!' and the hilarious adaptation of Hitchcock's 'The 39 Steps' where he played 13 different characters in a faced paced comedy.

He has trained with the likes of Greg Apps in the art of auditioning, Malcom Kennard (Catching Milat) is his current acting coach and has also trained with Kristina Sexton (Aquaman's coach) and director Peter Andrikidis.

His love of music led him to become a DJ at an early age working in clubs around the globe as well as kitesurfing, his passion which he has taught for the past 10 years on exotic beaches around the world.
