BIO

A master class Meisner technique student taught by Michael Saccente, Breigh has spent the majority of 2013 focusing on screen work. 2013 started off with a bang with Breigh starring in, and directing, 'Kick Ass Plays' for the Auckland Fringe Festival. This came after a busy end to 2012 where she played the iconic 'Babe' in Galatea Theatre's 'Crimes of the Heart' at the Pumphouse. Keeping busy with a character role in short film 'Electric', a savvy role in feature film 'ARA', and landing a small role in New Zealand's favourite soap, 'Shortland Street', as 'Faye Featherston', Breigh has spent the rest of her time working on new skills such as self tests for international screen auditions and voice over work, such as 'Molly the goldfish' in a series of TV commercials. Her comedic influences are SNL comedienne and actress Kristen Wiig, vlogger and youtube sensation Jenna Marbles, and dramatic and quirky influences include actresses such as Elisabeth Moss, Zooey Deschanel, Carey Mulligan, Isla Fisher and Robyn Malcolm. The later of course, who played the iconic character of 'Cheryl West' on the television hit show, 'Outrageous Fortune', which Breigh played the sixteen year old version of at the real life age of twenty five. Breigh plans to crack the international market one day but will gobble up anything local that may come up prior to this adventure. She is enjoying the journey.
