

BIOGRAPHY

David's desire to become an actor came from a young age, stemming from being involved in school drama classes and being part of the stage crew on a theatre production. However, after he learnt to become a drummer at age thirteen and joined a professional band, acting took a back seat. Most of his teen years continued to be involved in the band, until David decided to take a break at twenty years old and pursue a different path. He met his wife Rosslyn and began a family, while building up his own commercial trade business.

His acting career got a kick start when he received the opportunity to be an extra in the TV series McLeod's Daughters, which started filming in Adelaide in 2001. Since that day, David has been involved in a multitude of film, television and theatre productions, such as “Escape from Pretoria” (Arclight Films),” The Boys Are Back” (, Oranges and Sunshine, and A Second Chance.

He has continued to extend his skills by attending many acting courses and workshops, and even producing and directing his own short films. His dedication to the character, respect for the cast and crew, and willingness to work hard makes David a well-liked actor. His determination and love of the industry has fuelled his desire to obtain lead roles in big-budget films
