

Jayden Gronau

Jayden Gronau (He/Him) has been a lover of film since birth and an actor since he was 13. Inspired by his sister to achieve his dream, Jayden has been involved in a number of short films both in and outside of Sydney Actor School Productions such as Exhibit C (David S. Cooper), What it Means to Live (Hugo White), and Autonomless Cycles (Laneikka Denne). Jayden's strong connection to acting was also joined with his love for music which has also allowed him to become an amazing editor and finds enjoyment in using songs in his editing to effectively portray the story. Along with editing, Jayden has also learnt several production role skills with Sydney Actors School such as Camera Operating, Directing and Sound Recording. Jayden has been taught by a handful of incredible tutors such as Garth Holcombe, Stephen Hunter, Felix Williamson, and Pip Edwards. Jayden continues to work on his craft and explore his production skills along with improving on his love for Script writing to one day share with the world his stories that live in his chaotically, gifted mind.
