

Eddie Gazani is a highly skilled and adaptable actor with over 20 years of experience spanning theater, film, and television. Known for his versatility and deep commitment to the craft, Eddie brings a unique blend of creativity, discipline, and emotional range to every role he takes on. Whether it's a nuanced character in a dramatic series or a lively role in a fast-paced film, he consistently delivers powerful performances that captivate audiences.

Recent highlights of Eddie's career include starring in The Black Hand Mafia (2022), where he played the lead role under the direction of Kriv Stenders. He also featured as a news producer in God's Favourite Idiot (2021), directed by Michael McDonald, and portrayed a Taco Seller in The Wilds (2021), directed by Lison Maclean. On the film front, Eddie is set to appear as a tennis player in Apples Never Fall (2024), directed by Chris Sweeney.

Eddie's diverse background is grounded in formal training, having earned an Advanced Diploma in Acting for Screen from The Actor's Studio (2020) and a Masters in Music and Performance from the Queensland Conservatorium (2018). His fluency in multiple languages—English, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, and French—combined with his proficiency in accents such as Australian, American, British, South American, and Italian, further enhances his ability to embody a wide range of characters across various cultural contexts.

A passionate performer who continues to evolve, Eddie is driven by a desire to push boundaries and embrace fresh, innovative roles in the ever-evolving landscape of film and television.