At just 19 years old, pop singer-songwriter Mariah Lewy is already making waves with a voice that seems to have been crafted by the stars. Born in Sydney, Australia, Mariah's journey began long before she could speak, with music ingrained in her life from the moment her parents introduced her to the sounds of Destiny's Child. This early connection to music, coupled with a family that cherished their own tunes, shaped her into the passionate artist she is today.

Mariah's musical path has been nothing short of extraordinary. She began formal singing lessons at the age of five, dedicating her life to mastering her craft. Alongside her exceptional vocal talent, Mariah plays both piano and guitar, embracing a wide array of genres from pop to jazz, reggae to soul. Her influences span from SZA and Alicia Keys to Bob Marley and Billie Eilish, reflecting her diverse musical taste and deep emotional range.

Mariah's career highlights include a standout performance at the 2019 L.O.V.E. Awards in Los Angeles, participation in the Celebrity Experience in Hollywood, and recording sessions across North America, Indonesia, and Australia. She has also taken on roles in productions like Grease, performed live at the Seymour Centre, and achieved a High Distinction in her AMEB (Australian Music Examination Board) Grade 8 Singing exam. Additionally, Mariah has had the opportunity to perform at Warner Music, further solidifying her place in the industry.

Currently, Mariah is in the studio, writing and recording two new songs every week while staying actively engaged with her audience on social media. She is also recording an album in Los Angeles with Grammy Award-nominated and winning producer Danny Garibay, slated for release in 2025.

Beyond her music, Mariah is an emerging actress, coached by Peter Mochrie since 2021, and was selected for the callback stage of MOANA during a highly competitive global casting process. She has also studied acting at the prestigious National Institute of Dramatic Art (NIDA) in Sydney, Australia.

Mariah has worked with Joey Paul Jensen, a CSA award-winning casting director, producer, acting coach, and show business mentor, further enriching her experience and expertise across the entertainment industry.
