

Rohan Mirchandaney – Actor Bio

Rohan Mirchandaney is an Australian film, television and stage actor based in Melbourne, Victoria.

A graduate of The Australian Film and Television Academy in Melbourne, Rohan has worked with many of Australia's finest teachers and directors. Developing his passion for performance during his time at Melbourne High School, Rohan initially focused his talents on the stage and has starred in several theatre productions including The Importance of Being Earnest, A Servant to Two Masters, Cosi and most recently Bert V. Royal's Dog Sees God: Confessions of a Teenage Blockhead.

Following a move to the screen Rohan has over 30 short films to his name, as well as several roles in network television series The Worst Year of my Life, Again, The Time of Our Lives and It's A Date. He has encountered success in many film festivals including the Indian Film Festival and the Cannes International Film Festival for the films The Interview and Adjust both featuring as the lead.

Rohan has just wrapped an original comedy series 'How to Talk Australian' with renowned Wilfred director Tony Rogers which will be releasing in 2014. Rohan has a strong social media following and can be seen in the international festival recognized comedy webseries Doobie Nights as one of the leads at www.doobienights.com.