

BIOGRAPHY

Michael Kramer is a New Zealand actor and multidisciplinary artist with a unique background in science, engineering, and the creative arts. Since transitioning into acting later in life, Michael has appeared in a growing number of international productions filmed in New Zealand, often in featured roles.

He works closely with mentor Joel Tobeck and regularly contributes as a voice actor and screenwriter with Auckland Table Reads.

Michael is a published writer and photographer with work spanning marine biology and lepidopterology. He was also the lead songwriter of the German hardcore death-metal band MESSENGER in his youth. A versatile creative, he paints and sculpts with acrylic glass.

Recent credits include featured roles in M3GAN 2.0, alongside Allison Williams and in the interactive romantic comedy Choose Love (Netflix), next to Laura Manaro.

Upcoming roles include appearances in the remake of East of Eden (Netflix) next to Florence Pugh and in Spartacus: House of Ashur (STARZ) alongside Graham McTavish.
