

AJ Ho (professionally known as AJ) is a bold and captivating actress known for bringing chutzpah, versatility, and vulnerability to every role.

She starred as Miranda in 'The Collector' (2024), the Australian adaptation of John Fowles' classic, opposite Tigran Tovmasian, where her performance was praised for its fierce resilience.

Her 2026 festival release 'God I'm Starved' (co-directed with Denise Chan) explores intimacy, violence, and surrender through a modern gothic lens.

AJ's performances are marked by fearlessness and nuance, making her a compelling presence on both Australian and international screens.
