PEDRAM BIAZAR

Pedram Biazar is an Australian actor with Iranian heritage.

Born and raised in the eastern suburbs of Sydney, Pedram attended the National Institute of Dramatic Art (NIDA) at the age of eleven. His strengths in comedy and drama roles provided him with the opportunity to move into the advanced (adult) classes during his 3-year training.

The rarity of seeing actors and characters from his cultural background served as inspiration for Pedram to create and perform in diverse stories to improve representation in the arts.

His transition into college theatre saw him receive many praises and awards for his performances which resulted in his nomination for the prestigious Onstage category. His talents have since made their way into multiple nationwide TVC's and short films including NSW's Consent Campaign and Wesley Mission's anti-gambling Campaign.

Pedram currently studies a double degree in Psychology and Media and Communications (majoring in film and production) at Macquarie University which both aid his career as an Actor.
