

Brett D'Souza {BIO}

I'm a Melbourne-based Director/Writer/Editor who's been honing his craft for over 20 years. I finished school in 1993, I know, eons ago. I studied graphic design at Monash University, and designed for a few years. A lot of business cards, postcards and posters. It was around this time that a program called, After Effects came out... I realised I liked it better when the pictures moved!

In 2002, I moved to London and worked as a Producer / Editor / Motion Designer, making live television and commercials. It was a crazy time, we made new shows on a weekly basis. I returned to Melbourne in 2008 and started working as a Director / Producer / Editor.

I made commercials, content, documentaries, short films and music videos on the side. Some of my clients included, Movember, ANZ, McDonalds, The Alfred Hospital, Ronald McDonald House Charities, Simonds Homes, CBus, Live Better and many more.

After years of honing my craft I realised that my specialty is in telling the stories of real people, helping them to feel safe on screen and allowing them to find their voices. And comedy. It's the combination you never knew you needed. I also pride myself on getting most of the budget where it's supposed to be... on the screen.

You can check out some of my work at my production company website:

On a personal note, like playing tennis, watching the NBA and cooking. I do stand-up and recently made my acting debut on the ABC show Fisk. I'm also a single dad.

I love making films and I'm pretty good at it!
