

Sophie Hambleton

Sophie Hambleton is a highly regarded New Zealand actress with extensive experience across stage and screen.

She is best known for her role as Carol O'Driscoll in TV3's Westside, which earned her a Best Supporting Actress nomination at the NZTV Awards (2022). Most recently, Sophie portrayed Prime Minister *Jacinda Ardern in Transmission and Transmission Beta, receiving a Wellington Theatre Award nomination (2024) for Outstanding Performance.

A graduate of Toi Whakaari: NZ Drama School (2007), Sophie has built a career marked by critically acclaimed performances. She won the Chapman Tripp Award for Best Actress (2010) for Katydid, toured nationally as Janet Frame in Gifted, and is one of only three actresses worldwide to perform the solo play Fleabag by Phoebe Waller-Bridge. Other standout stage roles include Nora in Emily Perkins' adaptation of *A Doll's House and her award-nominated turn in Burn Her by Sam Brooks.

On screen, Sophie's credits span feature films and television, including Second Hand Wedding, Consent: The Louise Nichols Story, How to Murder Your Wife, Good Grief (TVNZ / AMC Networks), Warrens Vortex, Bust Up, and the acclaimed series After the Party.

Sophie brings warmth, depth, and versatility to every role, making her a compelling presence for both local and international audiences.