

India Rose is a Sydney based actor, singer and voiceover artist who has been described by many, as "sunshine personified". Natalie Imbruglia said of India, "she has true star quality", Richard Branson said, "she has the potential to be the next big thing". While she has achieved success in all three of her mediums, India's true passion, lies in acting. As an actor, India has worked in an array of award-winning short films, television series' and TVCs, and is constantly working on her skills in classes, as well as currently writing her own content; completely committed to her love of the craft.

India is fortunate to have worked with hundreds of brands and production companies across television, film, radio and digital campaigns, as well as holding a coveted ongoing position as the national female voice across all Seven Network Australia channels for the last four years. India first came to the public eye as a finalist in singing competition, The X Factor, where she placed 6th. Her singing has since taken her around the world, including international tours of the Middle East, East Timor, Egypt and Dubai with Armed Forces Entertainment, where she entertained and supported serving Australian troops.