

Rebecca King is an Australian actress known for her work in the T.V. pilot Dark Passage directed by David Cook, as well as festival contender Boy in a Web, directed by Ben O'Sullivan, playing the love interest of the two male leads.

Rebecca grew up in Brisbane, Queensland, where her love of performing grew from her involvement in musical theatre companies. She has continuously worked on both her singing and acting, taking regular lessons since the age of 9. Rebecca furthered her studies in acting by completing a Bachelor of Stage and Screen Performance (Acting) from the Australian Performing Arts Conservatory in 2020.

When Rebecca isn't working in film, she enjoys performing on stage in both plays and musicals. She is a strong and passionate singer who loves playing the guitar and piano and is currently learning to write her own music.

Some of her earlier work includes roles in The Surfing City (2022), Conditional Love (2023) and Untouchable (2024).

Rebecca's hobbies include painting and spending time with friends, family and her dogs.
