

Stacy Clausen Bio

Stacy began Screen Actors classes in 2018. Since then he's had 5 auditions, 4 callbacks and landed 2 roles.

His first professional role was a part in the US drama series, The Preacher, season 4, episode 8 'Fear of the Lord', where he played an angry bully who doesn't get his way. Stacy worked with some well known actors such as Pip Torrens. He learnt a lot working on a professional set, that left him hungry to turn his passion into a career.

His second role was in a VCA student film, 'Fright Night', directed by Gracie Dephoff, where he played a main role as 'Ben', a rebellious teenager, who causes trouble on Halloween night. The short film has recently been selected as part of SAGA Women's International Film Festival.

Stacy took part in the Melbourne Gang Show for 3 consecutive years. The Gang Show is the largest amateur production in Australia and is a high quality musical with lots of singing, dancing and acting. Stacy gained the valuable experiences of what a large stage show is like and opened his mind to new techniques and styles of acting.

Stacy aims to further his screen acting career by constantly improving his skills and working on his craft. He is currently working with Timothy Craig - experienced acting mentor, accent coach and co-owner of LA based Stanislavski Studios.

Stacy is a keen surfer, proficient guitarist and a qualified surf life saver. In his spare time, you'll find him listening and creating his own music tracks. He enjoys gaming, hanging with friends and is a skilled Aussie Rules footballer.
